“Emergency fire fighting system at LPG storage sites”

Bringing about more efficiency toward safety measures at LPG storage sites

Accident occur unnoticed or without planned. Once there is, damages toward assets or even the lost of lives can possibly follow. However, strict preventive measures can ease the damages.

“The installation of the emergency fire fighting system at LPG-storage building” is another safety measures introduced by PTT Public Company Limited since 2006 onwards. Aside from training on safe driving for LPG transporting; frequent safety inspecting of LPG-storage sites nationwide; and emergency drills at the storage sites, PTT has been trying to educate more than 145 dealers nationwide to understand the principle of “The installation of the emergency fire fighting system at LPG-storage building” in order to the dealers to realize the importance and agree to have the proper installation of the emergency fire fighting system. PTT expects the completion of the proper installation at all sites throughout the country by ending 2007.

It is the “water spray” system which important devices include pump, water pipelines, and injection head. During emergency, just a touch at the switch will start the water spray system. Water will be all over to replace and de-concentrate the gas and prevent any possible blast (LPG is normally heavy than the air surrounding; therefore, when leak, it will float at the ground level.

PTT realizes the importance and values “Safety” as the core practices when it is involved the community. To urge all involved parties to get serious with preventive measures, PTT has provide partial funding to the company’s LPG dealers for the installation of the emergency fire fighting system. PTT expects the successful installation at all sites throughout the country within 2007. For more information, please contact LPG Marketing Division at Tel. 0 2537 2289, 0 2537 2361, 0 2537 1906
